nati Convention.

THE Washington Chronicle considers the result in New Hampshire "a personal victory for President Grant," In the Presiden tial election of 1868, Grant carried New Hampshire by 6,967 majority. Now when there is a personal appeal made to the Republicans of that State in his behalf, he carries it by only about 1,800 majority-How many more such victories could be stand?

MEETING OF DEMOCRATIC STATE as follows: COMMITTEE.

It will be seen by reference to an announcement of the Chairman and Secretary of the Democratic State Executive Committee, published to-day, that there ocratic State Convention will doubtless be designated.

A "LOYAL" VIRGINIAN'S BEQUEST TO HIS DAUGHTER.

It is not often that we find a man who is standing on the brink of the grave pursuing the demands of the committee. The comhis children with a vindictiveness that would mittee scrutinised the condition of the bank, be discreditable at any other time. A case | AND WAS IMPRESSED WITH ITS SOLVENCY. of this kind has, however, been recently brought to light in Richmond, Va. It is that of Horace L. Kent, whose will was admitted to record in the Chancery Court in that city a few days ago. In it occurs the following passage, which to say the least, is fore leaving Memphis they gave the bank a a curiosity in will literature:

"To my daughter ----, who has done so | words: much to alienate my affections, but who I still deeply and tenderly love, I give as an evidence of the beauties of her doctrines of having been delegated to examine the afsecession and rebellion doctrines and aims | fairs of the National Bank and Fiscal Agent which have reduced me from affluence to for West Tennessee, with regard to the beggary, and as she yet thinks perhaps that | safety of the public money deposited in "The Lost Cause" will be regained, she said bank, take pleasure in saying they have may think my bequest as valuable more so | been met with a promptness on the part of possibly than the same amount given in | the managers of that bank truly commend-Yankee securities. I could continue my list to the extent of more than half a million of dollars, but the above will suffice. She will see what the effect of secession has been, but for which I could have left all my children a handsome competency.' Mr. Kent was "a Northern man, with Southern principles" to a certain extent at least. He had lived in Richmond many years, and as the head of a well known mercantile house, appears to have made a large fortune. He does not seem, says the Baltimore Sun, to have had any scruples against holding slaves. Indeed, his love for the Union seems to have been of an eminently material and practical character. One of the effects of secession which he considers so deplorable as to embody in his last will and testament is the "emancipation of eighteen servants," who but for "rebellion," he might have owned to the day of his death, and then bequeathed them to his posterity. He also appears to have had $25,000 Confederate notes at the demise of the Confederacy, and, considering the heavy business said to have been done by his house during the war, he must have managed matters prudently not to have had a arger amount on hand.

JURY TRIALS.

The Circuit and Criminal Judges of the State meet in convention in this city this morning, to consult as to the propriety of the 15th an editorial which, as it concurs in some views hitherto expressed by us 'on this subject, we republish:

For generation after generation, a party at common law was held to be incapable of giving any valuable or trust worthy evidence in his own case, and yet the great Tichborne cause seems to have turned almost mainly upon the demeanor and testimony of the claimant in the witness-box. The stupidity of the old rule consisted in the assumption, first, that all men are liars, when it may be for their interest to lie; and, secondly, that the best way to get at the facts is not to inquire of those who, ex necessitate, must know them best. In most civilized lands, these judicial dogmas have gone the way of trial by ordeal and other superstitious notions, The work of law-reform, however, is yet in its infancy. Thus far we have found out no method of rendering justice cheap, certain, and speedy. The fundamental idea of jury trials is an excellent one. Yet still we are as silly as silly can be Legislature at every stride." in the selection of jurors. What can be less rational than our theory that a juror must not know that which is perfectly well known to nine-tenths of the population? That he must not, for some time past, have read the for Postma newspapers? That he must not have paper says: formed an opinion or expresed it, when to form and express one has been the fashion? That, laving made up his mind according to an unofficial and limited statement of of the New York Times covered by official facts, it is impossible for him to change upon a fresh, authoritative and plenary state- Or, if the Postmaster General is bent on ment made under oath? That he cannot rive an impartial verdict, because he medium for the aforesaid publication, why appeas to be the third or fourth cousin of one of the parties? Then, too, what greater folly can there be than to refuse to receive testimony from a witness who has peculiar theological opinions, and does not believe that he will be specially punished in the other world for perjury committed in this, as if men might not strink from falsehood out of a feeling of self-respect, or out of innate veracity of nature, without considering the personal expediency of truth-telling? We do not pretend to say that all these whims of practice may not at some period of our civilization have had their value; and so it may have been useful once for all the lawyers and judges to wear wigs and gowns; so it may have been better once to conduct all the proceedings in law-French; so it may ot have been amiss to subject a man suspocted of homicide to the ordeal of touch. Why should not the world improve in law- for the opportunity to fire the guns as an practice, as it improves in every other accompaniment to the national music at science? Fortunately, the spell is broken. the festival. It is proposed to ask the use We no longer believe in the infallibility of of the cable for a very short period to fire

"PARTY PLATFORMS AND THE TABLET Under this caption the Tribune has an editorial in reply to the World, from which we extract the following: If the World earnestly sneks a basis substantial accord between parties on questo suggest the utterance of the last Demoteratic National Convention, held in Tamfmany Hall, July 4-6, 1868, as possibly af-ording such basis. We think we could tand on that, fairly interpreted.

The utterance of the last Democratic National Convention, to which the Tribune refers, is as follows:

A tariff for revenue upon foreign imports, and such equal taxation under the internal revenue laws as will afford incidental protection to domestic manufactures, and as will, without impairing the revenue, impose the least burden upon and best promote and encourage the great industrial interests of the country. AN ALMOST PORGOTTEN FRAUD.

We print elsewhere some very interesting developments touching the solvency of the Tennessee National Bank of Memphis, tion was such a great Republican victory of which George R. Rutter was President, after all, that it should be crowed over. JOHN NORMAN, W. Y. ELLIOTT. Now contrast these reports with that of the Bank Examiner under the National Banking law. Here we have a committee of the Tennessee Legislature, one member of which had been President of a bank, certifying to the solvency and safety of a bank which, according to the report of the Bank Examiner, never had such standing. It was indeed a shaky concern and wholly unreliable from the beginning. Their report to the Governor was made and their certificate to the bank given nearly four months after the Bank Examiner had reported to the Comptroller of the Currency that the affairs of the Bank were so loosely conducted, and purposely so, as to evidently impress him with the idea that fraud was contemplated. Were the members of the committee deceived; did they know so little of the business of banking as to be so easily imposed upon, or were they simply doing a little whitewashing for the benefit of a friend suing year.

Sec. and Treas. and supporter of the Brownlow administration, who was conducting the Fiscal Agency of the State in West Tennessee? The thing looks ugly any way. This "school fund" and its connection with the Tennessee National Bank of Memphis has never been thoroughly sifted. Every turn of the wheel brings to light some new and ugly some changes in our laws relating to trials by development, not the least important of jury. We find in the New York Tribuncof which is the report of Examiner Bull. A thorough investigation into this matter would reveal one of the most suggestive episodes in the Brownlow rule in Ten-

"The public would be glad to know what possible excuse the Postmaster General can have for supplying the country with copies envelopes, and under his own efficial frank. making the postal service a free advertising should these papers be sent first to Washing on and then again be transported at public cost? Copies of the New York Times of Jan. 24, bearing the Postmaster General's frank, and containing a defense of the President's appointments to office, County at the ensuing August election. have been circulated through the Mississippl Valley and, probably, other parts of the country. Mr. Creswell has repeatedly lecaired Congress on the duty and propriety of abolishing the franking privilege, but none of his arguments have been so forcible as this instance of abuse of the frank, furnished under his own hand." This is an ugly exposure of the practice of a pretender. THE last sensation in reference to the musical Jubilee at Boston is the report that several prominent electricians have applied judges or jarors. We no longer think that | the guns in London during the performance all witnesses are itching to commit perjury | of "God save the Queen."
